

BECAUSE THE MOST POWERFUL WEAPON U. S.
SOLDIERS CARRY IS NOT THEIR GUN
BUT THEIR HEART...

In the Spring of 2007, after hearing soldiers returning from Iraq and Afghanistan call Rush Limbaugh, Sean Hannity and other talk radio programs and say in frustration that the media is not giving America the whole story about what they are doing there, Ron Robinson, and his children Alexander (12) and Nicque (15) decided to do some research.

What was found were rarely-seen, awe-inspiring pictures of U.S. troops winning "The War on Terror" not only with weapons and brute forces, but penetrating one heart at a time.

Those images provided the inspiration to create The American Eagle Heroes Project. The name "American Eagle Heroes" was derived from The Ambassadors of Peace, Hope and Freedom Essay by 15-year old Nicque Robinson which depicts U. S. military men and women as the embodiment of the eagle at the centerpiece of the Great Seal of the United States. The mission is to honor, salute and commemorate our awesome military by sharing these images with as many Americans as possible.
